McADOO WILL CAMPAIGN FOR DAVIS AND BRYAN

RECORD BUSINESS IS MADE POSSIBLE BY SUMMER SALES

Past Week Brought Out Large Volume Of Retail Buying

SEVERAL SALES IN FULL BLAST

Chamber of Commerce Boosts Buy-at-Home Week This Month

Several special summer sales of the merchants of Albany-Decatur were well underway today with indications of probably the largest volume of summer business in the history of the two cities.

The local merchants bidding for the summer business, Matlock's Cash Store, Rahm Clothing Co., Ory-Cohen Department Store, Speake and Echols, Chandler's and W. H. Aycock Co., started sales during this week and reports show that the past week has been exceptionally good with a still better week ahead.

Matlock's is offering the buyer the nine cent sale that is well-known to Northern Alabama purchasers. Rahm's "Let Go Sale" is augmented this afternoon and tonight with a special entertainment for the ladies from the hours of 4 to 6:30 p. m., and the gentlemen at a smoker from 6:30 to 9:30. Ory-Cohen is selling out of the yard goods business and offering other exceptional values. Speake and Echols and Chandler's are each offering values in summer clothing, clothing of nationally known worth at a very low price. W. H. Aycock is selling at three chain stores in Albany and Decatur.

The old idea of a July Clearance sale is seemingly forgotten on account of the lateness of the summer season. All the merchants are overstocked in summer wears and are clearing out for the fall buying. The late summer has hurt the merchants but a benefit has come to the buyer.

Another feature of the week of sales is that the Albany-Decatur chamber of commerce has inaugurated a "Buy at Home" week for Monday July 14 and has urged every man and woman in the territory to buy at home from the merchants who provide a living for the towns. "If you cannot buy at home then refrain from buying out of town," is the chamber's slogan.

"Treat your local merchant fairly and you will find that he will do you many a favor that other firms not located in your cities will fail to do. Stand behind him, you need him and he needs you. The money that you send out of town isn't coming back, the money that you spend in town will return to you with full value."

"Go to the stores that are offering something of real value and buy from them. Now is the best time to lay in the stock for fall and winter and late summer clothing that you have been deprived of. Their prices are right and they are interested in your welfare. The mail order house has neither."

CIVILIANS KILLED IN REBEL UPRISING

BUENOS AIRES, July 12—Four hundred civilians have been killed during the fighting in the Sao Paulo insurrection, according to reliable advice from Santos, giving the American consul there as authority for the estimate of the dead.

CHIEF FIGURES IN NEWS OF THE DAY.

ADOLF HITLER, PRINCE OF WALES, EDGAR A. POE, GEN. VON LUDENDORFF

Lieutenant Edgar Allen Poe, U. S. M. C., attached to the Presidential yacht Mayflower, and a great friend of little Calvin Coolidge, Jr., commanded the naval detachment which guarded the lad's bier. The Prince of Wales will visit his Canadian ranch in September, and will attend the international polo matches in New York. He may also see the Willie-Firpo fight. Adolf Hitler, leader of the unsuccessful Bavarian putsch, has resigned as National Socialist leader, and has been succeeded by General Erich Ludendorff, "brains" of the German Army in the World War.

REV. TURNER WILL ACCEPT HIGH POST

An announcement of unusual interest made Saturday is the acceptance by Rev. Herman L. Turner, a prominent Presbyterian minister of Sheffield, who was reared here and entered the ministry here, of the responsible position of executive secretary of the Presbyterian church U. S. A., for the Synods of Alabama and Mississippi.

Rev. Turner's appointment, became effective with his resignation as pastor of the Columbia Avenue Presbyterian church of Sheffield. While he was pastor of the Sheffield church his membership has been greatly increased. In addition to his church duties Rev. Turner was recently elected to the office of Governor of the 26th Rotary district. The new executive will reside in Sheffield.

The following concerning the advancement of Rev. Turner was contained in a recent issue of the Tri-Cities Daily:

Rev. Herman L. Turner, pastor of the Columbia Avenue Presbyterian church Sheffield, tendered his resignation to his Session last evening, and will be voted upon by the congregation Sunday morning. The resignation is to become effective October 1.

Mr. Turner has accepted the position of executive for the Presbyterian Board of National Missions for the Synods of Alabama and Mississippi, with headquarters at Sheffield. There are 121 churches in these two synods, and in this new relation Mr. Turner will exercise a general leadership over all these churches. Four fields representatives will be associated with him in the work.

Mr. Turner spoke in the highest terms of his congregation and the fine way in which they have co-operated, especially his official board.

Rev. Turner and his family came to Sheffield May 1, 1919, since which time the membership of his church has doubled, as have other activities of the congregation, including financial contributions. He has been active in civic as well as religious work and is one of Sheffield's most active and useful citizens.

Rev. Turner's new duties will not conflict in any way with his office as governor of the Twenty-sixth Rotary district.

STEEL LECTURE IS ENJOYED BY MANY

Drawing upon his wonderful memory covering over fifty years service in the ministry, Dr. S. A. Steel, pastor of the First Methodist church delighted a large audience Friday night when he lectured on "The Knights of the Saddle Bags; or the Pioneers of Methodism."

James H. Johnson, superintendent of the Sunday School, presided and presented Dr. Steel.

The speaker was evidently familiar with "The Circuit Rider" as he proceeded with his lecture. Dr. Steel deplored what he claimed was a tendency "to run every Methodist preacher through the same 'hole,' and make 'standardized stuff.'"

"Ours is an age of 'canned goods,' in the religious world as elsewhere canned sermons are too often the spiritual bill of fare," he declared.

After reminding that "no church can live on its heraldry of the past," Dr. Steel presented some of the preachers of the past as he had known them.

Roosevelt was quoted as having said that the circuit riders of the Methodist church were makers of American history. General Lee was quoted as saying that amid the wreck and ruin of his day, a knowledge of the deeds of the great men of history kept him from despair.

John Bunyan, the son of a tinker, was shown to have had more influence, by far, than Emperor Julian "who attempted to abolish the church." "God has always chosen the poor of this world who were rich in the faith for His great purposes."

"Sectarianism is sin" said the speaker, "but denominations are used of God to carry out His plans."

In closing Dr. Steel described the numerous "ships of Zion" that would weigh anchor on the golden shore, in connection with his teaching that there is work enough for all and honor enough for all.

German Churches Need Pastors
BERLIN—The tendency to "withdraw from the churches of Germany for political reasons having disappeared these organizations are gaining daily in strength and membership. As a result there is an increasing demand for pastors, and theological students have better prospects of finding employment on graduation, than the young men who study medicine or the law. These two professions still are overcrowded.

SWEEPING PROBE BIRMINGHAM CITY AFFAIRS PLANNED

Investigation Is Asked Of The Conduct Of AN Officials

Davis Declares That A Grand Jury Will Be Called Next Week Of The Conduct Of

(Associated Press)
BIRMINGHAM, July 12—Resolutions urging that a special session of the Jefferson County grand jury be called to investigate the finances of the city of Birmingham from the time members of the present city commission took charge, up to the present time, and a further resolution asking that an investigation be made of the conduct of every city official, from the lowest to the highest, be made during that time, were adopted at a meeting Saturday morning of the city commission.

The resolutions, the first of which was offered by Commissioners W. H. Harrison and W. E. Dickson, and the second by Commissioner Dickson, followed the arrest Friday evening of W. H. Glasgow, former head of the public improvement department, on a charge of embezzlement, growing out of a shortage in city funds, alleged to have been discovered when the Birmingham Electric company sent a check down to pay the third installment on two public improvement assessments.

Investigation showed it is stated that the company has not been credited with a previous payment of $5,960.30. The resolution also asks that a committee, consisting of the president of the five Birmingham banks, be named to appoint an auditor to make a complete audit of the public improvement department, from the time when the present administration went into office, until the present time.

Glasgow's records show, was arrested at eight o'clock Friday evening on a warrant sworn out by Chief of Police Fred McDuff and brought to the county jail at 10 o'clock, making bond for $7,500 a few minutes later.

Solicitor Jim Davis when asked about the proposed grand jury probe, said he hardly would be able to summon a special grand jury for this purpose by Monday but that he would do so sometime early in the week and that a sweeping inquiry into the matter would result.

MISSING MINISTER IS FOUND AT LAST

(Associated Press)
BATTLE CREEK, Mich., July 12—Rev. Oren C. Vanloon, pastor of Berkeley Community church, near Detroit, who has been missing from his home eleven days, was found here yesterday suffering from heat, exhaustion and insufficient nourishment and with the letters "K. K. K." three inches high branded between his shoulder blades.

Today he is at a local hospital in a serious physical and mental condition. Apparently ignorant of any of the events that have transpired since his disappearance.

The minister left his home at Berkeley, July 1 for his cottage at Orchard Lake. From then until his wife identified him early today, his whereabouts had been a mystery. Rev. Vanloon was picked up unconscious on the street yesterday. He was unshaven and his clothing was disheveled.

His appearance indicated that he had traveled far afoot, or had been subjected to rough treatment. As his mind began slowly to clear today, in response to treatment, he said that the last he remembered was starting for an interurban car on the morning of his disappearance.

The pastor on several occasions, had spoken from his pulpit against the Ku Klux Klan and his friends said today he had received threatening notes.

NAME COMMITTEE FROM COUNCIL TO CONFER ON PAVING

Agreement Expected To Be Reached With Citizens

NEXT MEETING IS SET FOR FRIDAY

Short Session Held By Council Last Night At City Hall

A settlement by agreement of the numerous protests made against assessed costs of street paving in the city of Albany appeared probable today following a decision of the city council to appoint a committee to confer with protesting property owners.

The committee, named is as follows: John M. Maxwell, A. L. Jolly, C. H. Chunn, T. F. Lewis and city attorney Melvin Hutson. It is expected that the property owners, who lately have entered written protests against certain paving costs, will appoint a committee to confer with the council committee. It is expected that definite plans will be made next Friday for a settlement of the entire paving costs controversy.

It was pointed out to the council that costs on the paving had increased too rapidly to suit the property owners, at a number of regular and special meetings of the council for the past few weeks.

A number are reported to have filed their objections to the costs so as to meet every legal requirement, and so as to point out every legal phase of the entire controversy in the hope that members of the council would not fail to realize clearly the position of the property owners.

The council's attitude at each hearing is reported to have been in accord with its action in naming a special committee in the hope of ending the differences that have arisen.

Short Meeting Friday Night
At its meeting Friday night a number were present, who desired an adjustment of paving costs including representatives of the Westminster Presbyterian church and of the West-side Presbyterian church. It was pointed out by the church representatives that their churches did not wish to enter into any law suit in connection with paving controversy, also that the church congregations were not asking for special privileges.

The differences as to paving costs, have existed for years ever since a previous council voted a paving program amounting to about $400,000 soon after the world war. The movement to terminate the whole matter in an amicable manner is looked upon with favor.

METHODIST MEN'S CLUB ENJOYS BANQUET AND MEETING AT Y.M.C.A.

The Methodist Men's club of the Central Methodist church held the third of its monthly meetings Friday night in the east room of the R. R. Y. M. C. A. with C. W. Matthews, its president presiding.

The club was greatly pleased at the announcement of Dr. James D. Hunter, pastor of the Central Methodist church, that Dr. George Stuart, of Birmingham, had accepted the invitation of the club to address it within a month or six weeks. Dr. Hunter stated Dr. Stuart would be expected to dine with the club members on the evening of his arrival and later, the distinguished visitor would make an address to the general public.

With Mrs. H. O. Troup, as pianist a number of lively songs were sung, and two quartette numbers were given by H. O. Troup, J. W. Boggess, Morris Ford and J. R. Nicholson.

The evening was moving along the usual channels with short addresses and songs, when all of a sudden, Henry Day, chairman of the board of stewards, said with a thick tongue as he staggered and fell over, "I am a mighty sick man." Newspaper people saw a tragic news story. But two

UTILITY UNIT HEAD HOLDS CONFERENCE

Hon. A. G. Patterson, president of the Alabama public service commission, is here for the weekend visiting home folks and looking after a few business matters. While here Mr. Patterson held an informal conference with a number of citizens who are interested in the present status of the street car service of the Twin Cities.

W. A. Bibb, chairman of the city's mass meeting, held some days ago relative to the car service, and Charles H. Eyster, attorney for the traction company, remained in conference with Mr. Patterson about an hour.

The local men reported to the official of the public service commission the action taken at the recent mass meeting. It is expected that a resolution, prepared at the mass meeting is to be made the basis of any agreements reached as to the service of the street car company.

Cotton Dusters To Be Exhibited

A demonstration of new processes for dusting cotton plants to destroy the boll weevil will be given on the T. M. Harvey farm, near the Southern Cotton Oil company's plant Monday at 3 o'clock.

The demonstration is under the direction of the Moline-Harper company acting in cooperation with the county farm agent, J. C. Ford.

The public is invited.

DAVIS PLANNING SHORT VACATION

Progressives Have The Best Opportunity In Democratic Ranks

(Associated Press)
NEW YORK, July 12—W. G. McAdoo, in a statement issued today, said that he would give John W. Davis his cordial support and take an active part in the campaign.

"I am satisfied that Mr. Davis is in full accord with the progressive program outlined in the democratic platform," said McAdoo, "I am confident that as president he would faithfully execute the party's mandate."

Referring to criticism from some quarters against Mr. Davis, because of his connection with certain interests as a lawyer, Mr. McAdoo said:

"Mr. Davis' high character, integrity and service should satisfy every apprehension of this sort."

"If I did not believe this," continued Mr. McAdoo, "I could not render aid because I have always believed that the interest of the people should never be subordinated to a slavish partisanship. The influence and power of these progressive forces must not be dissipated by division between various political movements. They must be consolidated and used like an irresistible battering ram of that party which offers the best instrumentality for service to the people."

Mr. McAdoo's statement, continued follows:

"Mr. Davis and I have been friends for the past 12 years and I had the pleasure of discussing the political situation with him yesterday. The great body of progressive democrats who supported me so strongly in the convention have been anxious to know my attitude toward Mr. Davis' candidacy. "My visit was for the purpose of learning from Mr. Davis his views on the important issues before the country. I am satisfied that he is in accord with the progressive program outlined in the democratic platform."

"There is a deep-seated determination on the part of the progressive forces within the democratic party and those outside of it, desiring to cooperate, to force prompt and decisive action on the part of the next administration for solution of the pressing problems of agriculture, transportation, tariff, taxation and foreign relations, which have been so horribly man-handled by the republican administration."

"The influence and power of these progressive forces must not be dissipated by division between political movements."

"Clearly there is no promise in the republican party. Clearly there is a promise in the democratic party if this progressive influence is wisely and vigorously used within that political organization. The hope of genuine reforms and progress is more likely to be realized at this time through the democratic party than through any of its opponents."

"I shall, therefore, give the Davis-Bryan ticket my cordial support and shall take part in the campaign on my return in September."

Mr. McAdoo gave out the statement as he sailed on the Homeric with his wife and two daughters for a six weeks visit in France, Spain and Portugal. Among those who bade him farewell were David Ladd Rockwell, the manager of his national campaign. When recognized by persons on the pier and aboard the liner, Mr. McAdoo smiled and doffed his hat.

Mr. McAdoo plans to leave next week for a vacation on the island of Islesboro in Pensacola Bay, Maine, as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, if he can make a selection of a national chairman by then.

EGYPTIAN PREMIER
WOUNDED BY SHOT(Associated Press)
CAIRO, Egypt, July 12.—The Egyptian premier Said Zagloul Pasha was wounded in the right side by a revolver shot at the railroad station today, when he was about to leave for Alexandria. The premier was walking along the platform between the sub-governor and the acting commandant of the police, amid cheering crowds when a young man fired at him from behind the front rank of spectators, and then threatened the police commandant.Pistol Shot Kills
Large Hawk Here

A large hawk, measuring over three feet from tip to tip, was shot and killed at a down-town produce house Saturday morning. Some think the hawk was in search of his favorite food, chickens, when it visited the produce center.

The bird was shot and killed with a pistol fired by T. M. Wiley who has an electric repair business near the produce company's building.

MANDAMUS CASE
SET FOR SATURDAY

At the request of M. D. Wiggins, chairman of the democratic executive committee, of Morgan County, respondent, in the mandamus proceedings brought by Attorney John Sample of Hartselle, against Mr. Wiggins, the hearing of the case will be postponed until next Saturday. Mr. Sample is seeking to compel Mr. Wiggins to have the name of John T. Kyle of Hartselle substituted for that of J. R. Howell on the democratic ticket to be voted this fall, for member of the county board of education. Judge O. Kyle was expected to have heard the case today but was unable to do so.

A DAILY PRAYER—We pray Thee to help us lift our eyes from the earth and to look to the hills "from whence cometh our strength."

Our republican friends might revamp their slogan "Keep Cool with Coolidge" and make it read "Not to Cool."

The impression gotten after his nomination is that most Twin City people were "original" Davis supporters.

Losing candidates before the democratic convention now have an opportunity to display their own, private brand of sportsmanship.

If the Democrats end up as well with their balancing in November as they did July 9, Mr Coolidge can turn to New England.

It is said West Virginians and Virginians are already raving lest the Old Dominion shall seek to make Davis a Virginia President in case he is elected.

Some of the LaFollette managers are asking that Charles Bryan be named for Vice-president on the LaFollette ticket. The ability to lead more than one party at the same time seems to be an attribute of the Bryan family.

James M. Cox, of Ohio, is given credit for having put over the Davis candidacy. At present, it looks like Mr. Cox has made a better job of candidate selection than he did of candidate election.

If the outside world thinks the newspapers of the Tennessee Valley are too prone to extoll of the virtues of the Valley, they must remember that the newspapers up in this end of the state have such a lot of good things to talk about.

The appearance today of a road building machine where it can be seen by all, is still another opportunity for our people to see their duty to the country roads.

There should be good reports from the road machinery exhibit. There should be many converts made as to the practicability of the use of such machinery in Morgan county, following the exhibits.

A powerful Fordson and one man puts the grader to work and keeps it at work. The grader is said to be of scientific construction and capable of giving a smooth, perfectly graded surface to streets and highways if in capable hands. It is also said that no great skill is needed to operate the grader.

Where plain dirt roads are to be shaped, the grader does the work rapidly and leaves the road in about the same shape as now appear our city streets.

It is of course necessary where dirt roads are used that they be graded occasionally, especially after heavy rains.

Those who claim to be familiar with the building and up-keep of dirt roads, declare that the grader as exhibited here is "just the thing" to be used throughout Morgan county.

The grim thing called Death has settled on the White House, claiming the youngest son of President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Almost in the very hour of the President's political triumph, nominee without opposition of the republican party, this eternally new wonder about death and what it may mean for the boy strikes him. God has taken his bairn. What does all the pride of power and place matter now? What inexplicable gesture of Providence is this hat turns the official residence from a house of rejoicing to one of grieving?

Few tragedies have the power to affect the soul of man with greater sadness than the tragedy of death. Only he who has seen the cold, senseless form which but a little while ago was playing about the nursery floor; which but a little while ago was running off to school with boyish vigor and enthusiasm; which but a little while ago was a budding companion and chum, lying in a flower-banked casket, can really understand the poignant sorrow that rends the heart and tears the soul and makes no outcry.

Only the mother knows a greater sadness, for with the passage of the soul from its house of clay to brighter worlds beyond, comes the memory of the helpless babe which so often she has pressed with tender kisses and bathed with tears of happiness while beholding its first tiny smile—the smile the color of a Spring sunrise.

The heart of the world goes out to Calvin Coolidge, President of these United States, and the soul of the world of mothers sympathizes with that lonely mother in the White House. And the Creator will send, in His infinite compassion that touches and blesses alike the broken hearts in the lowly and palace, some token of consolation which will enable the grief-stricken parents to reconcile themselves to death, knowing that it is but rebirth to a greater and broader life somewhere amid the stars.

And yet even though time, the great physician may heal the bruised souls and torn hearts to a merciful degree, there will always be the longing, the exquisite, tortuous longing—

“: : for the touch of a vanished hand
And the sound of a voice that is still.”

—Birmingham News.

After having reduced the price of gasoline, coal, ice and a few other common commodities, while serving as governor of Nebraska, can Mr. Bryan be depended upon, when he is elected Vice-president, to sell the two cent postage stamp at bargain rates of, say about three for a nickel?

A Train Of Thoughts
For the Sabbath and Other Days

By J. E. Blair

As long as the forest attracts more than the "under-growth," as long as pure bred animals are held as more beautiful and valuable than "scrubs," and as long as the "big show" with its splendid actors attracts more people although the price is high, than do the miserable little "side-shows" filled with snakes and dwarfs and deformed people, there is hope, high hope for the human race. Let religious haters take notice. In a word, as long as excellence, growth and the christian graces attract our people more than their opposites, there is hope for the human race. If the people ever cease to "lift up their eyes to the hills" they are doomed. If they lose the desire to plant their feet on "the upward way," they have already taken the "back-track," and worse still, they are treading the "broad road that leadeth to destruction." Once more, if "arrested development" suits people better than growth, far better "death" than the hard vain struggles through which all pass who are born as all us human beings are born. The conclusion just expressed is found in the Bible although not in so many words. It is fair to believe that the Savior of this world believed that death was gaining, when He came that we "might have life more abundantly." It is quite possible that the world still continues to grow worse. To, entirely too many, deformity seems quite as agreeable as growth. It may be true as held by many "good" people, that the cold hand of death is closing around our world. Truly with many the "side-show" attractions and side issues, seem to be taking the day. But right here comes a good idea: "We don't have to join the 'non-growth' crowd." If the world at large don't want 'growth,' we can take it for ourselves. There are none keeping us out of the "big show." Nothing is hindering us from taking the 'big chance. For the sake of argument let us say the world is 'hell-bent,' we do not have to follow suit. And as for one, the writer don't propose to. But granted all is true so far—that "so far so good," unless some way is shown whereby we may take "the upward way," the train of ideas is incomplete and all but useless. Well, growth begins, upward walking begins only as Christ is created in us "the Hope of Glory." And finally just by faith in God, do what that beautiful, safe and sane hymn advises: "Let Jesus Come into Your Life." But if any foolishly refuse to accept the divine invitation if they live until "the evil days come," they curse their evil fate.

Japan Scraps Naval Vessels

TOKIO—Three of Japan's capital ships, the Ibuki, Ikoma and Kashima, doomed under the Washington treaty, have been sold for scrapping. The navy department now announces that the hull of the super-dreadnaught Isona, under construction when the treaty became effective, and the battleships Aki, Satsuma and Hizen will be used for targets and experimental torpedo, mine and fire extinguishing tests.

Why we Think Our Church Will Appeal To You:—
BECAUSE it is not a social, but a soul-saving institution.
BECAUSE its service aims not to please the senses, but to win the heart.
BECAUSE it features not side-issues, but the preaching of the word.
BECAUSE it shuns the sensations of the moment and preaches Christ crucified.
BECAUSE it feels its duty, without fear or favor of man to proclaim the whole counsel of God.
BECAUSE it has a definite platform and sounds the firm note of conviction.

King Ludwig's Court Train

Restored for Railway Museum

MUNICH—The court train of the late King Ludwig II of Bavaria has been repaired and refitted in the state railway shops here and returned to Nuremberg, where it is kept in a railway museum.

The train cost a fortune, the car used as the king's drawing room having been wonderfully furnished. The tables are of marble and the chairs of blue silk with heavy gold ornaments. The ceiling of the car, too, is of gold while the coat of arms of the Wittelsbach family and the initials of the king are displayed freely on all the cars in gold relief.

Revelations of a Wife

Why Midge Was Nervous as She Talked with Mrs. Marks.

WITH a heroic effort I controlled my twitching lips at Mrs. Marks' naive interest in Harry Underwood, and answered her question in casual, impersonal fashion.

"Oh, yes, I saw the gentleman who called! He's talking to Mrs. Underwood now. Thank you for letting him in."

She giggled consciously. "Don't thank me," she bubbled. "I'd stand on one foot at that door for a week on the chance of seeing anything as nifty as that gent. Gee, but he's got 'em all left at the post an' is trotting down the course all by himself! I'd leave my happy home for him any day. And I'll bet you're going out somewhere with him—you're all dressed up to kill. Well, some folks have all the luck! I don't blame you, though. I'd have a lark once in a while by myself if I were you."

I wondered if her stressing of the pronouns was unconscious, or if she meant me to know that she thought I was entitled to an occasional dinner or dance with a handsome man because of Dick's too patient admiration of Mollie Fawcett. For the instant the thought outweighed the crudity of her comment. Then before my indignation had a chance to betray itself in either my face or my voice, I put it down with a firm hand.

Mrs. Marks had no more idea of the enormity of her impudence than of a hot tent would have of his lack of neatness. She was suddenly set down to a Fifth Avenue dinner-table. Besides, I did not know in just what relation she stood to Lillian in the investigation my friend was carrying on concerning the mysterious furs. It behooved me to walk warily, lest, as Lillian herself would term it, I "upset the lentils."

Lillian interrupted. "With a non-committal little smile I changed the subject. "I hope you have been well since I saw you," I said. "I can't complain." She used the time-honored formula as if it were the most original sentence she had ever uttered. "My body's all right," she went on with a lugubrious sigh, "but I've been awful upset in my mind. If it hadn't been for your friend, Miss Underwood, I think I'd have been picking for a squirrel by this time."

I frantically wished that Lillian would summon me, or that anything would happen to interrupt us. In ignorance of what was going on, I was afraid of making matters worse by I dared make only the most commonplace of comments. I blushed for my own banality as I murmured, "Is that so? I am so sorry," and hoped that my countenance did not betray my joy at Lillian's entrance.

"Oh, are you here?" There was an edge in her voice as she addressed Mrs. Marks, which I think even that thick-skinned lady perceived.

At any rate she reddened and confusedly mumbling about "something in her oven," she withdrew precipitately.

"Have You a Trunk?" Lillian wasted no comment upon her exit.

"I'll stay here for a little," she said. "You're all ready, but your coat and scarf, aren't you? Good. Harry has a taxi eating its head off downstairs."

I moved toward the door at her hint, but barely had reached the hall before she was at my side.

"I certainly am getting forgetful in my old age," she said. "I meant to ask you before—have you a trunk in the basement storeroom?"

I tried not to stare at her as I gave an affirmative answer.

"Have you many things in it?" "Very few. It is almost empty."

"Good. Have you any objection to lending it to me for a few days, and may I empty it, and put the contents up here in the apartment somewhere?"

I smiled affectionately at her. "You know if you wish to rig up a trapeze out of the trunk and attach it to the chandelier, I shouldn't object."

"I know it, you blessed girl!" she returned. "And you'll know all about it very soon. Another thing. How convenient a memory has your janitor? He and his wife seem devoted to you."

"You would like them to forget the incident of bringing the trunk up to you?"

"Correct, oh, clairvoyant creature. Also to close his eyes that I am going to take the trunk away with me on a taxi. Can it be managed?"

"I am sure it can," I said slowly, and I saw Lillian dart a quick glance at me.

"You won't need to ask him," she said. "Just take me downstairs and vouch for me. He is very pleasant to me, but his manner plainly shows that he considers there is no head to the table when the Donglas is away. Come on down now before you get out."

She turned back to the kitchen door, extracted the key and with a reassuring promise to Mollie that she would be back within five minutes, she looked the door from the outside and put the key into her purse.

SANDMEN

By Juanita Hamel

It fun to fashion the queer little Sandmen and pretend that she is fashioning her ideal! And he watches longingly from afar wishing that his could be the head to which the dainty fingers are pressed. While she—well knowing that his wistful eyes are ever following her—molds under the laughing eyes of her girl friend the Sandmen in grotesque imitation of him whose image fills her coquettish little heart. But he knows that when the little Sandmen are full and forgotten he will still be waiting, knowing full well that his playful mockery is but to try him and that as the Sandmen pass, so will her capricious mood vanish, and all her sweetness will be just for him whom she now so joyously teases.

YOUR HEALTH

What to Do to Avoid or Banish a Summer Cold

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WE have had such unreasonable weather this year that, at the moment of writing, nearly everybody complains of having a cold or of having just recovered from one.

To a large extent it is your own fault when you suffer from a cold. When you contract a cold it is evidence that your resistance has become lowered, making you susceptible to germ infection.

This particular year the colds seem to be of the influenza type. That is, the victim complains of feeling tired and chilly for a day or two. Then there may be an acute attack of sneezing, followed by chills and a sudden rise of fever.

As a rule the fever subsides after twenty-four or forty-eight hours, leaving the patient exhausted and perhaps aching in body and limb. When this stage is reached you should stay quietly in bed for another day at least.

Most people get up as soon as the fever disappears. They go out and of course contract more cold. Then they find themselves really sick and the doctor diagnoses the cause as influenza.

If only one person—the patient, himself—were affected by this lack of judgment it would not be so serious. As a rule, however, the victim of a cold returns to his office, store or school with a "sneezing" condition of the nose, perhaps sneezes a lot, or even coughs. Whether or not he does one or all of these things, he is spreading the infection among his associates. This should be sufficient reason to stay at home until completely cured.

Let me give you a little advice: When you first begin to "sneeze" or to sneeze is the time to take precautions.

Go home, take a hot bath, a dose of castor oil, or other cathartic, and go to bed. Restrict your food to liquids for twenty-four hours. Instead of handkerchiefs, which reflect from constant use, use gauze or vapor machine and throw these away, carefully wrapped in a paper or a paper bag ready for the furnace.

Keep your room well-ventilated, but have your bed out of a draft. The next day you should get up feeling much better. If you don't feel better, then ask your doctor to stop in and see you. His visit may save you many days' absence from work or school.

Take care of these colds and you will prevent further infection, which is bound to follow if they are neglected.

caused the bone to get sore. How can I remedy this condition?

A.—You should consult a physician for local treatment, such as bathing and massage.

MRS. EDWARD W. Q.—How long is whooping cough contagious?

A.—Whooping cough is contagious as long as the cough persists.

A. G. N. Q.—What causes my little brother to jerk his head? He complains about something in the back of his head? What would you advise?

A.—It would be advisable to have him examined by your physician for the cause of the condition. It may be due to nerves.

A. C. B. Q.—What causes the veins in my arms, hands and legs to become very prominent in the evening, while they are hardly visible in the morning? I feel nervously exhausted.

A.—This condition may be due to over-exertion or strain. It would be advisable to see your doctor and have him prescribe for your nerves.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medical, hygiene and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it cannot be published in this column, Dr. Copeland will, when the question is a proper one, write you personally. If a self-addressed stamped envelope is enclosed, address ALL INQUIRIES to Dr. R. S. Copeland, in care of this office.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl in my teens. When I go out with any one or with a crowd, I absolutely refuse to be "petted." For that reason, every one of the girls and men friends I had, shun me, and I am looked upon as a crank and can never be invited to go anywhere.

Now, Annie Laurie, I want to have friends, but if I have to act as they do, I don't want any. Can't you tell me something I can do in order to win back the lost friends and still have a good time?

TRIX: I know a girl who says that every one of her girl friends save one permits "petting." But she has never permitted it and all her men as well as girl friends know that she will not permit it. That doesn't permit her from having a good time, however. For she uses her brains and her wit to keep her friends. They like her because she's a "good sport" in every way that she can be without losing her self-respect. And if she permitted "petting" she would lose her self-respect.

She's jolly, amusing, entertaining. People like her. She doesn't fret upon all the follies of her friends, but she talks and thinks of other things. Don't you think you might like to follow her example?

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am in love with a young man just one year my senior. We were the best of friends. He told me he loved me and at one time hinted of marriage, but we had a little quarrel and since that time everything's gone wrong.

He wrote to me and said he loved me and always would, but I didn't pay any attention to the letter. He's got a new position now and I see him very seldom. When I do see him, I always wish we were friends again. When we first quarreled I knew he was very jealous and so I went with other young men just for spite, but I always seem to long for him again.

I don't know whether he feels that way toward me or not. He's been going with a girl, but I don't think he cares much for her. I would like to regain his friendship. I don't want to write because he might not want my friendship, and might tell all my friends how foolish I am.

He's never alone, so I can't talk to him, and he hasn't any telephone. So how can I regain his friendship?

GOLDY: If the young man did not want to renew the friendship he would not have written you after the quarrel. Write him just a short note asking him to visit you. You can then talk the matter over in the privacy of your home.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of general interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

Summer Comforts for Every Baby at Home or Away

By WANDA BARTON

THE comfort of the baby during the warm weather is always a weighty consideration—how it may be kept cool, comfy and properly fed, how its nap may remain undisturbed, the best bathing arrangements and the right amount of open air at the right time. This, of course, applies more strictly to the baby that must remain in the city.

The suburban or country baby lives under entirely different conditions and is reared and cared for much after the fashion of the choice plants of the garden. It has fresh air, sunlight and shade as needed, and just the simplest and most perfect food which is usually right at hand.

Baby should be dressed lightly and coolly. Other wise mother with a brood of prize winners puts her babies into little Chinese silk rompers and sandals that is all—and healthier youngsters would be hard to find. A warm, sudsy bath, a sponge off at night solves the bath problem. Plenty of sleep, the right food and staying outdoors from early morning till twelve, indoors during the heated part of the three hours, then outdoors again until bedtime is her plan. The children nap during the heated part of the day and so are kept quiet and cool. Doing away with all flannels seems to harden the flesh and they do not take cold, do children who are more clothed. The use of one garment certainly makes the clothing problem less complicated and laundering an inappreciable factor in household arrangements. Silk is the only material that does not get cold or clammy, and that is why it is chosen for the one garment worn.

The packing of baby's clothes for the vacation trip is usually quite a problem. However, a deep straw telescope suitcase solves this wonderfully, as it makes an excellent trunk for baby. The top tray is partitioned so that one part may be used for the baby's basket and the other part for small belongings, while the under part holds an amount of clothes that is quite unbelievable. A tiny satin hat or bonnet box for baby has a linen slip-over for traveling to protect its daintiness.

The rubber ring, chamber and folding wash-bowl, not forgetting the waterproof, hot-water bottle, are all comforts that may be easily packed. Another astonishing comfort for baby is a rubber sleeping-bag to use when the weather is bad and baby is obliged to go out in it. The bag is home-made. One mother has made hers of three rubber-lined aprons, one under the apron that is over the top, and the third joined on to form the wide hood. Baby, all dressed, is slipped into this bag, and, independent of the protection of an umbrella, travels as dry and warm as toast.

SHE'S going to auction off her baby—the pretty little mother twenty-two years old. She hopes to get as much as five hundred dollars for the baby. I wonder what she's going to do with the money?

Five hundred dollars! What will it buy for her that will take the place of that baby?

A new dress and a new coat, with real fur on it, and a hat from Paris. Or will she take the money and go away somewhere and look for work?

Her husband has deserted her and her mother advises her to get rid of the baby so she can get along better in the world.

"I know how it is myself," said Mother, to the newspaper reporters who came to ask about the auction. "I was deserted at just about her age and I had to struggle to bring her up; and now I'm married again and my husband can't bear a baby in the house, especially my dear, little baby."

"He doesn't want me to be called 'Grandma.' He says it makes him feel like Methuselah."

"My daughter is young and she'll get over all this trouble if she just gets rid of the baby and has a chance to take decent care of herself. What can a girl as young as that do when she has to support herself and her baby? It's hard enough to look after yourself these days—the way things cost. And when it comes to a baby—dear, dear!"

Are We Changed Today?

I wonder who'll bid for the baby?

I'm glad it's going to be sold, aren't you?

To hate to think of the poor little cuddly thing left to the tender mercies of such a mother and such a grandmother.

What do they get out of life, anyhow, women like this, with their craze for clothes and gaiety and more bodily comforts?

What do all these things count in comparison to the love of a little hungry-hearted child?

What sort of women are we creating anyhow, we moderns?

Why, it's been a proverb for centuries that a mother would do anything on earth for her child! Mother love is the one thing we've been taught to believe in, mother patience, mother generosity, mother sacrifice—and now every little while I hear of some mother who's offering her baby for sale!

Her own flesh and blood—for sale!

Why, the wolves of the Russian steppes know better than that! What bribe could you offer a hyena that would make even such a beast as that give up her baby?

Try to take the offspring of a tigress away from her, and see how long you'll live.

Hunger and thirst, and burning heat and bitter cold, all these things the mothers of the ages have borne and borne with a smile, for the sake of their children.

Poverty, hard work, humiliation, sorrow, disappointment, disillusion—these are sometimes the bitter fruits of maternity. But what real woman does not hug them to her heart and glory in them—when all is said and done?

Who Is at Fault?

What's a woman worth who won't go without everything herself to give to her child?

What can money buy for that child to take the place of natural affection?

Why, we're only here in this world a little, little while. How is it possible that women are beginning to think that they can shut out the voice of nature and trample down their own decent feelings and live happily ever after?

What are a few years of poverty and of sacrifice compared to a lifetime of remorse and the shame of such desertion as that?

Sell your baby, Little Mrs. Wolf—get the best price you can for her. The worst thing you can wish for the poor child is that some woman who's like you will buy her, just because she happens at the moment to have money enough to afford a toy.

Too poor to bring up your own baby? Well, maybe there is just such poverty as that in this unnatural, cruel, cold-hearted world today.

If there is, then we'd better start to work to find some other kind of civilization—that's all.

Our grandmothers reared families of twelve and fourteen; they

Women Of America Urged to Labor for World Betterment

LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, of Minneapolis, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs delivering a keynote address at the opening of the organization's seventeenth biennial convention here today expressed faith in the government and ideals of the United States and threw down a challenge to all enemies of the republic, but called on the women of the nation to help make it a still better place to live in.

"Our task for the next ten days," she told the convention, "is to make ourselves definitely wiser and a more living part of the creative power that makes for righteousness."

Mrs. Winter pointed out that people no longer can say truthfully that "all is for the best in this best of all possible worlds." In these latter days, she added, "no one except he who is so blind that he cannot see tragedy, so deaf that he does not hear the sorrow of the world, so dumb that his mouth fails to respond can possibly be comfortable in ignorance of the fact that this is a world where there is wrong and stupidity, doubt and turmoil, and that the best thing that can happen to a human being is to be part of the forces of righteousness that are at work to make things better in this very far from perfect world."

Expressing for her organization belief in the United States, she said: "Our country is a demonstration that brotherhood is not an idle phrase or a far-off dream, but that it is the only practical solution of the world's difficulties. And there is no brotherhood that does not entail duties as well as privileges."

"The heart of America is sound. The brain of America is clear. And I believe the arm of America is not that of the weakling or coward, but that of the strong man. The red blood of the country's life is redder than the flag of anarchy and healthy enough to counteract the poison."

"We have gathered to pool our problems, our wisdom, our energy, and our inspiration."

"There was a certain out-of-door wholesomeness to early America, but as civilization has grown it has drawn churches and homes and lovely build in its train not only music and art, but also slums and prisons and hospitals, twisted bodies and twisted souls, the young criminal the grafter, and the hopeless drudge, the flaming anarchist."

"It would not be worth while for us to come together if we did not believe that every wrong and failure can be cured, if we did not come in faith hope and joy. We represent that great sound America, those myriads of homes where loves rules, from which men of integrity go forth to make business sound and constructive where children grow up to be American men and women."

"But what makes a nation great? It is that inhabiting a sound body there shall be a soul that can use the body as its tool. What makes a nation immortal? The same thing that makes an individual immortal—the spirit. Great civilizations have grown and flourished and died upon this earth and we remember them according to the contribution they have made toward the life of the spirit."

AMUSEMENTS

Ten different types of a mother. That is the record that Edith Yorke one of the best known "mother" actresses in America, has just established upon completing her work in the heart interest screen play, "Mothers-in-Law," a Gansier production for Preferred pictures to appear at the Princess theater Monday and Tuesday. Miss Yorke has played the following "mother" types:

- Loyal mother.
- Interfering mother.
- Nagging mother.
- Self-sacrificing mother.
- Extravagant mother.
- Self-offending mother.
- Hard working mother.
- Indolent mother.
- Complaining mother.
- Ambitious mother.

However, in "Mothers-in-Law" Miss Yorke declares she has the sort of a "mother" type that she likes to portray as she is shown as a loyal, uncomplicated little woman who summons all her strength of will to guard the happiness of her son and his wealthy young wife.

Outsiders Explain What Most Lures Them In New York

NEW YORK—The question, "what things peculiar to New York City most tease the curiosity of the person who never has been there?" was answered in thousands of inquiries received from prospective visitors to the democratic national convention.

The answer is: first Wall street and the Stock Exchanges; second, the Woolworth and Metropolitan skyscrapers; and third, Coney Island, the order representing the relative popularity.

Curiously, those who profess the greatest interest in the Stock Exchanges almost invariably add, "and he scene of the Wall Street bomb explosion in front of J. P. Morgan's." Others, seeking assurance that they will be able to view the famous skyline from the dizzy towers atop the Woolworth and Metropolitan structures, plaintively inquire "What has become of the Singer and the Flatiron buildings?" the architectural marvels of a generation ago that now squat in the shadows of rivals which scratch the sky much deeper.

Bronx Zoo and Botanical Gardens rank about fourth in popularity as metropolitan wonders, with the Statue of Liberty and Tomba Prison close competitors for fifth place. Then, in the order named, come the American Museum of Natural History and the Metropolitan Art Museum the subway system and the under-river tubes, Greenwich Village, Brooklyn Bridge, Ellis Island and "The Little Church Around the Corner," the Church of the Transfiguration.

It was noted by the convention bureau which mailed answers to all these queries that Chicago people, for instance, were interested above all in New York's subways; that the Stock Exchanges were the first things town and village bankers wanted to see; that parents who will bring children here with them invariably wanted to now "will the zoo and the aquarium be open?" and that inhabitants of moderate-sized mid-western cities were most curious about the reputed bohemia of Greenwich Village.

Thousands of prospective visitors wrote, "Can we see the slums, and Chinatown and the Bowery?" or inquired about the accessibility of Grant's Tomb on Riverside Drive, the Jay Yard, historic Bowling Green on the Battery, Central Park with its miniature lake and mountain playgrounds, the great universities, the Public Library, St. Patrick's Cathedral, the protestant Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Trinity and St. Paul's churches of pre-Revolutionary days, the world's two biggest railroad terminals, down through the long list of famous places and things, modern and historical, with which this city abounds.

An inquirer with a facetious pen wrote Stanley J. Quinn, directing vice president of the local citizen's non-partisan National Convention Committee:

"I have heard that the Island of Manhattan was purchased from an Indian chief for $24 worth of beads and rum. Will the beads, or the rum, be in exhibition?"

Mr. Quinn replied that "they probably won't," but that everything else in the metropolis worth seeing would be; that the Stock Exchange galleries would be thrown open to visitors, the Woolworth and Metropolitan towers would be open, Coney Island would be rally-hoping full blast, and all the other attractions the city could boast would be made readily accessible to sightseers.

BRYAN SPENDS DAY IN CONFERENCES

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, July 12—Governor Bryan, of Nebraska, democratic vice presidential candidate, spent the day in Washington, attending to semi-official business matters and incidentally conferring with Chairman Hul of the democratic national committee about the national campaign.

He intended to leave for his home travelling by way of Chicago tonight, and declared that one of his first duties would be to notify the Nebraska state democratic committee that it would have to select a new candidate for governor to run this fall.
